

François Cys

Born in 1979 near Dunkirk (northern France), François Cys is a researcher, inventor, music lover and an eccentric jack of all trades.

The sole objective for his inventions is to entertain us and encourage us to develop our creative potential.

After having been a cabinet-maker, he began by exploring different ways of transforming everyday objects and also the relationship that can be created between body movements, mechanical dynamics and acoustic experiences.

Since 2004, he has taken objects and modified their purpose in order to create a range of amusing installations. Bicycles, bathtubs, pumps or even scientific instruments can become the medium for multi-sensory discoveries, which are often an interactive experience.

Besides the interactive installations that are found mostly in his main project « Les espaces Cyclophones » François Cys experiments with sound in all its forms within the non-profit association « Evolplay » and the group « Dame dame tambourine »
